

Global Peace, Mutual Trust, Respect and Understanding workshop in Heriot-Watt University, Malaysia

Daniel Njau representing the University of Nairobi as an Association of Commonwealth Universities (ACU) member Universities from over 20 countries in developing skills, work towards a shared goals of creating a fairer, more inclusive society, and cultivating innovative solutions to promote Global peace, Mutual Trust, Respect and Understanding. The ACU Respect Residential School was hosted by ACU member institution Heriot-Watt University (HWU) Malaysia. The program was designed in partnership with Common Purpose, an international leadership development organization to enable students to develop their ability to work fluidly across the cultural boundaries and increase their understanding of tolerance and respect, while exploring practical measures to promote it in their home institution and beyond. The University of Nairobi is a multi-ethnic University that has long embraced the diversity as one of its primary strength hence it support the effort to continuously harness the power of inclusivity , respect and tolerance. This, we believe, is pertinent for a positive social change not just for our community, but for other institutions and global communities. University staffs and students needs new competencies and skills fit for the 21st century, to be successful and tackle the complex challenges they and the world face.
